

THE WHIG STANDARD.

From the Brooklyn News. "THE STAR OF THE WEST." A Star—The Star Spangled Banner. Oh! who has not heard of the "Star of the West," That hope of the nation, so brilliant in story, From political strife now taking his rest Till his country shall call him to honor and glory. Locomotives may rave, and strive by false arts To injure his fame, he's enshrined in our hearts. Then rally boys rally, for the "Star of the West," He's a craven that halts till our country is blest.

When war's deadly blast threatened strife and dismay And fears were indulged of a British invasion; He counselled the plan to drive the foe away, And saved our loved country from war's desolation, Nerved the arm of the soldier, the mind of the sage, His fame is inscribed on bright memory's page. Then rally boys rally, for the "Star of the West," He's a craven that halts till our country is blest.

When foes were expelled, evils hung o'er our land, Our industry languished for want of protection; Forcing Farmers, Mechanics, and Merchants to stand, At the mercy of workmen of foreign selection. The American System, that happy design, Then gave token to all of his greatness of mind. Then rally boys rally, for the "Star of the West," He's a craven that halts till our country is blest.

Whigs! rally from mountain, from hill and from plain, When time shall arrive for the grand demonstration, Lo! our country requires your service again To place Henry Clay at the head of the nation. Then rally once more, a firm hearted band, To call our first choice from the shades of Ashland. Then rally boys rally—prepare for the fray, We will triumph again, and elect HARRY CLAY.

From the Journal of Commerce. DEATH IN HIGH PLACES. "Death, the great counsellor, who man inspires With every nobler thought and fairer deed; Death, the deliverer, who rescues man; Death, the rewarder, who the rescued crowns."

It is well occasionally to review the doings of this great leveller of the human race, were it only to mark his impartiality. If ever he was partial, it has been in recent times to public functionaries of the United States. The frequency of death in high places of late is remarkable. To say nothing of the long list of official men, whose dust is now with the long line of low monuments in the Congressional burial ground, within the past two or three years the fatal wand of the great enchanter has touched many of the sons of ambition and of fame, and turned them to cold and lifeless clay. If this article should meet the eye of any of this class, let it not be passed too lightly over, since they are in the shambles, and will soon have to go the same way. A little while since ROGERS sat at the head of the Navy Board, and was enrolled at the head of the navy list. His name has been transferred to the roll of death, and the hardy sailor has cast his last anchor in the grave. He sleeps among the brave, the fair, the eloquent, and the wise—as they were. In the same neighborhood lies TIMNEY, who for many years served under the Government of his country. After sailing many years over the sea of life, sometimes in sunshine, sometimes in the tempest, he too made fast near his comrade. Not far was he carried from his command at the navy-yard to his lowly bed in the earth. "Earth to earth, dust to dust." Next followed STEVENS, struck down from the same station by the unconquerable foe, conqueror of all, who never strikes his flag to the boldest and the bravest. At night Stevens was in the midst of apparent health. In the morning the spirit had departed! It was a time of sudden death among public men. He was joined unto the congregation of the dead. It was not long before PATTERSON followed. He that was brave and troublesome to the foe at New Orleans, rejoicing in the common victory over the armed myrmidons of England, could not maintain the conflict with the old enemy, equally expert and dreadful on the land and on the sea. He struck his colors, and was conveyed to the silent companionship of the commodores and generals whom the spoiler has delivered over to the guardianship of the grave.

"How sleeps the brave, who sink to rest By all their country's wishes blest!" But the power of arms does not avail with this foe, still less does he yield to the force of arguments or the eloquence of appeals. If the warrior must lay his laurels at his feet, the statesman and the civilian cannot be expected to do less. On the 4th of July, 1842, SAMUEL L. SOUTHWARD, acting Vice President of the United States, and FRANCIS S. KEY, an eminent lawyer, each delivered an eloquent address at the east lawn of the Capitol, under the grateful shade of wide spread trees, to a multitude of Sabbath school teachers and children. Before the revolution of another Independence Day, they had both ceased from among the living, and were entombed with the lowly dead. Key, like Pinckney, of Maryland, and Webster, of New Hampshire, died in the midst of action. Almost literally were they carried from the bar to the grave; from the high elevation of mental toil to the lifeless inanity of death. But they had done well in their day and generation, and left an untarnished name to their friends and country. Not only was the Senate, the House, the bar, and the army, visited by the great leveller, but the judicial bench has received a summons. MARSHALL, its light and its glory, ornamentum lumen et decus, as Cicero would say, had not long disappeared; but it was by the slow process of disease, preadmonishing his friends that they must prepare their minds for the extinction of that illustrious light. But PHILIP BARBOUR, who sat on his left hand, had no warning. His spirits ran high at night. In the morning he was dead. No friend was near to witness his last agony, to receive his last breath. He was found in his bed a mass of clay—the spirit was gone! Save me from this dying! If kind Heaven will deign to answer that prayer, oh, may my eyes, as they grow dim in the last struggle, look on the faces of those that love me, see perhaps the starting tear, and read in the expression of the features of the living that sympathy for the dying which is above all price. At the funeral of Judge Barbour Rev. GEORGE G. COOKMAN, then chaplain to Congress, delivered an address in his usual style, which was distinguished for its simplicity, pathos, and power. He delivered his message to the great ones before him with fidelity as well as feeling. "Be wise now, therefore," said he, "Oh ye Rulers, be instructed, ye Judges of the earth, Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, &c." In a few weeks he went down into the depths of the Ocean with all on board the President. The President! what a fatal name was that in 1841! Returning from the inauguration of Harrison, I met COOKMAN. He shook me by the hand, "Farewell," said he, "I am off to England. I am going to visit my aged father, and drop a tear on the grave of my mother." Alas! he was neither to see the one nor weep over the dust of the other. "Nor wife, nor friends, nor sacred home," was he again to see. That tremendous catastrophe befallen, in his case, a wife and six children of their husband and father. Oh Death! all modes, as well as "all seasons are thine own." In this way was the Conqueror dealing out his fatal shafts on the right hand and on the left, when as if to attract a good deal of attention he had never yet commanded since the day that Washington obeyed his high behest, he struck at the loftiest victim he could find, and the nation trembled under the blow. The inauguration of HARRISON was sublime, but the funeral, who shall describe it? That was a day never to be forgotten. And who was that chief, that rode at the head of the many brave men, tried in battles on the land and sea, who in full military dress followed the mortal remains of the then commander-in-chief to that last resting place? MACOMB, and in a few weeks the solemn sepulchral rites were performed for him. He had, when in health described the peculiar style of the military salute to the deceased President, as the body was borne to the tomb. The Major General's salute was soon paid to him! Such is life!

Never did those lines of Gray appear more true and impressive after reviewing such a history:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power, And all that beauty, all that wealth ere gave, Await alike the inevitable hour. The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Edmund Burke not only exclaimed poetically, "What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue," but in homelier prose said, he "would not give a speck of refuse wheat for all that is called fame in the world." If this was his testimony in life, what must it have been in death? Shall not this nation see in all this the hand of Providence?

SUGAR. From a new work just published in New York, entitled "Hand Book of Plants and Fruits," we extract the following particulars respecting this indispensable article of domestic consumption:

Sugar in the United States is a subject of increasing interest. The demand is rapidly advancing. Its production in the State of Louisiana, to which it is here principally confined, is a source of much wealth. The capital employed in that State is $52,000,000, with 40,000 hands and 10,000 horses, and the average annual manufacture of sugar more than 80,000,000 lbs., and 4,000,000 gallons of molasses. The cane crop in the United States last year (1842,) was an average one, and the whole aggregate sugar crop of the year was 142,445,199 lbs., though nearly 13,000,000 less than in 1840. Our imports in 1840, were, of brown sugar, to the value of $4,742,492; white or clayed, $838,458. But there was exported, of refined sugar, to the value of $1,214,658. It is thought a supply of sugar for home consumption might be produced in the United States. The consumption in the United States in 1830 was about 70,000 tons.

The product of a hand on a sugar estate is put down at the cultivation of six acres, producing 5,000 lbs. of sugar, and 125 gallons of molasses. The value of the sugar on the spot is 54 cents a pound, and the molasses 18 cents a gallon; total, $297.50. The annual expense per hand, tools, &c., $105. Two crops are made in succession on the same land, one of plant-cane, and one of rattoons; it then lies fallow two years, or is planted with Indian corn or peas. An acre yields about 1,200 lbs. of sugar. The State of Louisiana has 700 plantations, 525 in operation, producing annually about 90,000 hogheads of 1,000 lbs. each. The raw sugar imported in 1840 was 121,000,000 lbs., valued abroad at $5,000,000, and imported from six different countries. This, with our own product, is over 263,445,000 lbs. But maple sugar constitutes in addition a large proportion of our domestic consumption, amounting annually to eight or ten millions lbs. The protection afforded by a tariff has greatly increased the production of sugar in the United States. From 1816 to 1828 this increase was from 15,000 to 45,000 hogheads.

ELECTRO-MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.—It will be recollected that an appropriation of $30,000 was made during the last session of Congress, for the purpose of trying an experiment with Professor Morse's Electro-Magnetic Telegraph, between the cities of Baltimore and Washington. We have ascertained that this work is now rapidly progressing. About a month ago, those having the contract commenced laying the leaden pipe, in which are placed the electric wires. In the course of a few days it became necessary to suspend operations, for the purpose of procuring more suitable material. This was obtained, and the work again resumed. The pipes (about an inch in diameter) are now laid from the signal office in McHenry, near Poppleton street, Baltimore, to the Relay house—a distance of nine miles. They follow the course of the railroad track, except in a few instances where, for convenience and economy, curves have been avoided. Professor Morse, we learn, contemplates, immediately on completing his telegraph to the Relay house, making a trial in order to ascertain its capacities before going further. If this prove successful, he will prosecute the enterprise with despatch, until it shall be accomplished agreeably to the original design. The pipe in which the telegraphic wires are placed is buried some ten or twelve inches under ground, and can be put down with little difficulty.—Baltimore Pat.

KEEP YOUR FEET DRY.—Cork Sole Boots, of my own make, cheap for cash, and no humbug; to my numerous customers and the public generally, I invite them to call and examine my new style of Cork Sole Boots, which for neatness and durability, I challenge this or any other city to equal them, and for the low price of $7. Also, Ladies and Gentlemen's Boots and Shoes of every description of my own make, extremely low for cash. As I sell no work but my own make, all those who purchase from me may depend on getting the worth of their money. Don't forget the store right on the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 10th street. nov 14—e6ft JOHN MILLS.

"SHALL IT BE ASH OR MAGNOLIA?" The above is a quere of the Richmond Enquirer, in reporting the fact that a pole has been cut at Ashland, for the Clay Banner in the Baltimore Convention. The editor alludes to the gift of the grand flowering Magnolia, sometime since made to Mr. Clay: "The Heathen Idols had each their favorite tree. The Oak was consecrated to Jupiter, the Olive to Minerva, the Myrtle to Venus, &c. The question now is, which tree shall be consecrated to Henry Clay? It was but a few weeks since, that a Horticulturist on the Banks of the Mississippi sent a Magnolia, and dedicated it to his Divinity. The Federal presses caught the sound, and nothing was so sublime, nothing so suitable to the genius of Henry Clay, as this towering and flower-bearing tree of the American forest." But the recently cut Ash sapling leads Mr. Ritchie to exclaim:

"Ash, then, let it be, and cut from Ashland! And henceforth Ash is to be the favorite tree of Mr. Clay. It is to constitute a part of the mummery of 1844; and let it be understood that Mr. Clay does not hesitate to stoop to such mummery!"

Of course, the gentlemen who thought that General Jackson would make about as good a President as a cock would a sailor, would not think that the use of the Hickory Pole might be pleaded as precedent.

But, in reply to the question, we answer it shall be both Ash and Magnolia. When strength and vigor are requisite, the tough Ash shall represent the force and tenacity of purpose of the great statesman; and when the consequences of his labors for the happiness and prosperity of the nation shall be seen in the people's happiness, and his own elevation to the Presidency, then what so appropriate as the gorgeous native flower of the American forest, whose beauty delights the eye, while every section of the country is made redolent with its far-reaching fragrance.

Let it then be both Magnolia and Ash. The strength and beauty of the American forest are appropriate emblems of the beauty of the political course, and the strength of the political character of HENRY CLAY.—U. S. Gazette.

The New York correspondent of the Providence Journal thus fancifully describes the performance of OLE BULL:

"He then laid his cheek caressingly upon his instrument, which gradually awoke, and wailed, and moaned, like an infant broken of its slumber. Every tone seemed fraught with human grief and passion. He introduced a dialogue, in which a sweet voice complained so sadly that it made the heart ache with pity, which was answered from another string with imprecations so violent and threatening that it made one almost tremble with fear. I fancied a young girl was pleading for the life of her lover, and receiving only curses in reply."

Colonel Benton is earnestly advocating, in the columns of the St. Louis Missouriian, the annexation of Texas to the Union. We do not think that he need be so pernickious upon that subject. If Texas does not come to the United States, he can go to Texas.—Louisville Jour.

A DEBUT.—The New York Express says that a very "unsuccessful debut was made by a young gentleman on the Park stage, on Saturday evening, in the character of "Romeo." The debutant had been employed in the bar of a bowling alley. In the closing scene, where he takes poison, falls down and dies, the audience, who had been laughing at the tragedy all along, became convulsed with laughter, and cried out on all sides, "Set 'em up! set 'em up!"

TUCKER & SON, Merchant Tailors, having just received their Fall and Winter Stock of Goods, respectfully announce the fact to their foreign and city customers, and also extend an invitation to the public generally to examine their assortment of French and English Cloths, Cassimeres, Vestings, and Fancy Articles for Gentlemen, all of the very latest styles, and so varied in prices that every one may be suited.

It has been their object, in the selection of goods the present season, not only to please all tastes, by presenting a splendid variety, but also to convince all who are disposed to test the matter, that they can be furnished with clothing at a regular establishment in Washington as cheaply as at a store or by going abroad: it will therefore afford us pleasure to illustrate these facts either by direct or indirect comparison. nov 27—d2wif

WHEN WILL THE PUBLIC CEASE TO BE HUMBLED?—P. W. BROWN, Merchant Tailor, in opposition to all humbuggers, most respectfully requests members of Congress and strangers visiting the city, not to purchase their clothing before calling to examine his large and superior stock of French and English Cloths, Cassimeres, and Vestings of the latest styles; as it is prepared to prove to them, that he is selling the same article of clothing from 20 to 25 per cent. cheaper than certain dry goods storekeepers that wish to take the trade out of the tailors' hands by holding out false pretences to the public, that they are selling suits of clothes from $10 to $20 cheaper than they can be purchased elsewhere. I want to know how it is possible for any set of men that have no practical knowledge of the business, to sell clothes cheaper than practical tailors—men that know no more about making coats than they know about laying bricks—notwithstanding all their arrangements with the celebrated tailors to cut and make their clothes, and their great facilities for buying goods, unless they have a facility for buying with out paying for them? I am determined to undersell them, and not to sacrifice my trade to such an avicious set of men until the last dollar is gone! All I ask is for you to call and examine for yourselves.

A SHORT LIST OF PRICES. Dress coats, good wool-dyed black, $15 Do do super 18 Do do a beautiful article, French or English, 20 Beautiful Cloth Cloaks, 20 The above goods will be found ready made, or, if preferred, he will make to order at the same price every article, in proportion with the above prices, to complete a gentleman's wardrobe.
